Zero (of a function) – for any function $f(x)$, if $f(a) = 0$, then a is a zero of the function. The value(s) of x for which the value of the function is zero. The real zeros of a function are the x-intercepts of its graph in the coordinate plane.